

By Sean Murphy Tourism Writer 14:18, 22 JUL 2020

Two Scottish beaches named in UK top 10 according to Google reviews

List ranks the most breathtaking British beaches to visit this summer.

Everyone knows that Scotland has some incredible beaches, and it appears Google users agree as two of Scotland's most popular have been named in the UK top 10 of the site's reviewer rankings.

Holidu, the search engine for holiday rentals, gathered over 550,000 Google Reviews for over 650 beaches in the UK, creating a list of the most breathtaking British beaches to visit this summer.

With Scotland's summer still serving up the odd sunny day and with uncertainty surrounding travel abroad still looming, more people are looking to explore the country's own golden sands.

Mellon Udrigle Beach in the Highlands and Machir Bay on Islay received an average rating of 4.9 stars as they made it into the top 10.

Mellon Udrigle narrowly missed out on the top 3. (Image: Sarah Johnston)

The northernmost beach in the list, Mellon Udrigle is tucked away up on the northwest coast near to the village of Laide.

Remote and stunning, the white sands offer unrivalled views of Suilven, the mountains of Coigach and even the top of Stac Pollaidh.